Stokes-Forbes Nuptials.

The wedding of Miss Helen Jean Stokes to Mr. Charles Forbes Stokes, happily solemnized on Tuesday afternoon in Saint Clement's church, was most delightful in its dignified simplicity. Mrs. Alice Brown at the organ played soft wedding music that gave way to the impressive strains of the Lohengrin Wedding March as the bride party was seen approaching the flower covered porch of the church through the wonderful tropical garden that surrounds Saint Clement's. The bride, who is a charming Australian girl only recently arrived in Honolulu, appeared on the arm of her brother, Mr. John F. G. Stokes. She was preceded by Mrs. Stokes as matron of honor and by two small tots, twin children of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Bell. At the altar the bride and groom were met by the Rev. Canon Upson, who read the impressive Episcopal wedding service. Directly after the ceremony the bride and groom retired to the vestry, where the register was signed according to the English custom.

The petite beauty of the bride was set off to utmost advantage by her exquisite costume, a creation from the hand of a girlhood friend in Australia. The gown was of white crepe de chine made with the modish pointed train and trimmed with beautiful old lace. Her long tulle veil, which was worn with a Juliette cap caught with sprays of wax-like orange blossoms, fell gracefully to the hem of her train. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and ferns. Mrs. Stokes, her matron of honor, was robed in a handsome gown of white tissue trimmed with exquisite lace. With this she wore a large white picture hat with plumes. Her evening piece was of pink roses. The altar party and the guests of the bride couple were all attired in white, a costume very properly becoming more and more popular at weddings in tropical Honolulu.

After the ceremony the entire party motored to Punui, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stokes, where an informal reception was held. The decorations were all in white and green; great masses of feathery bamboo enclosed the innat where delicious punch was served and where the wedding gifts were displayed. The bride couple received the congratulations of many friends standing beneath a wedding bell of white flowers. The wedding hall of white flowers. The wedding hall of white flowers. The wedding hall of white flowers.

Following the reception a collation was served in the dining room, the bride cutting the wedding cake. Mrs. Stokes presided at the coffee urn and was assisted by Miss Euphie Shields and Mrs. A. T. Bell. The bouquet when thrown to the assembled guests was caught by Miss Ella Shields. The bride and groom then departed amid showers of rice and good wishes to spend the honeymoon on Kauai. Upon their return they will be at home in the Carl Andrews house on Wilkie avenue.

The groom, as curator of botany in the Bishop museum, is well known in scientific circles both in Honolulu and on the mainland, having distinguished himself through his many noteworthy contributions to the botany of the islands with its kindred subjects. In the bride the community gains a charming young lady who is a dis-

Bride and Groom to Arrive Soon.
A romance which had its beginning in Honolulu a year ago, culminated in Victoria, B. C., on September 1, when Miss Ella Rosamond John, prominent in society circles in Seattle, became the bride of Floyd H. G. Emmans, business secretary of the Honolulu Young Men's Christian Association. The ceremony was performed in St. John's Episcopal church at noon, being attended by friends and relatives of the couple to the number of 300, following which a wedding breakfast was served at the residence of an aunt of the bride.

The couple are now completing a honeymoon spent in the many fashionable resorts of the Canadian mountains, Seattle and California, and are expected to arrive in Honolulu October 20, where they will live with the mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Luella Green Emmans, at her Walkiki home, while they are furnishing their own home in Kaimuki, which Mr. Emmans has owned for several years. Mr. and Mrs. Emmans will live in Honolulu during the coming year, and following the exposition in San Francisco, Mrs. Emmans, senior, plans to take the family abroad for a year, visiting Egypt, Europe and India, returning to the old home in Minnesota.

Musical Program on Maui.
(Special Star-Bulletin Correspondence)
WAILUKU, Sept. 18.—The Makawao Literary held last Saturday evening at the Malulu residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Baldwin was a great artistic and social success. Mrs. Louise Chisholm Jones had charge of the program of the evening and it was one of the most interesting ever given in Makawao. Mrs. Jones interpreted Cavalleria Rusticana, and gave her audience a most excellent idea of the wonderful opera. She sang several of the beautiful arias, and explained the parts that are difficult of interpretation. Miss Mary E. Hoffman, who had just returned from a summer's engagement at Hilo, accompanied.

For the second part of the musical program, Mrs. Jones sang taking folk songs of the Spanish, Italian, Scotch and Irish people. When she was through depicting the music of people in song, Miss Olive Lindsay appeared at a cleverly arranged window as a Spanish girl, and then as an Italian girl. After the Scotch and Irish songs, Miss Arline von Tempky represented a Scotch girl, and then an Irish maiden. Both young ladies were artists at the task and received loud applause and praise for their excellent makeups.

A most enjoyable evening ended with a dance that was a great pleasure. People were present from all parts of central Maui.

San Francisco Mirrorings.

From Honolulu comes an account of the reception given by Princess Abigail Kawannakoa in honor of her house guest, Mrs. Hugh Stewart of Los Angeles (Miss Alice Graves). It was a beautiful function and was expressive of that lavish hospitality which has only too sadly become extinct in the Hawaiian life. It was given August 12th, at the Pleasanton hotel, where the Princess has apartments, and was attended by over 600 people. The guests were greeted by K. K. Lilikalan, who, in the days of royalty, received the guests for the sovereigns of Hawaii, and on this occasion, wore the orders conferred upon him by King Kamehameha and Queen Liliuokalani. The hotel was thrown open, and was a blaze of glory, the royal Hawaiian yellow being carried out in plumaria, almanacors, corpepsis and the huapala vine, combined with tropical ferns and palms. Each guest was presented with an ilima lei in accordance with the old native customs.

The Princess was very handsome in a Parisian gown of black lace over white, with which she wore her famous yellow feather lei. Mrs. Stewart was gowned in cream chiffon, trimmed with lace, and wore a rope of diamonds.

The lanais were draped in Hawaiian, English and American flags, and a Hawaiian orchestra rendered the native songs while tea was served. Quite a number of the guests are well known in the San Francisco smart set, among them being, Mrs. Richard Cutts, Mrs. Walter Dillingham, Mrs. Frederick Funston, Mrs. Francis Gay, Mrs. Wickham Havens, Mrs. Robert Newell, Mrs. A. G. Hawes Jr., Mrs. Richard Ivers, Mrs. Nelson Jensen, Mrs. Walter Macfarlane, Mrs. Harry Macfarlane, Mrs. C. A. Macintosh, Mrs. L. L. McCandless, Mrs. John T. Meyers, Mrs. Arthur Owens, Mrs. M. M. Scott, Miss Marion Scott, Mrs. E. R. Stackable, Mrs. Herman Focke, Mrs. Georg Rodlek, Mrs.

Mongolia Sailing.

Such a crowd as there was down at the Alakea dock on Sunday morning when the Mongolia sailed for San Francisco. It was a regular picnic affair—the crisp, sunny day, the sparkling green water, the flowers, the noise, the waterfront atmosphere, the smell of the sea, the throng of gaily dressed people, the babel of many languages, tears, laughter, shouts—all were a part of the excitement and fun.

And nearly all society was there to join in a tenth to sail on the huge leviathan, nine-tenths to see them off. Yet the passenger list was one that would naturally draw big crowds. Who so popular and so deeply missed as the Princess Kawannakoa, who is taking her children east to school. And Mrs. Reesley—who was formerly Elizabeth Coney—was of course the center of a large throng of regretful friends who would like to have had her defer her return to Germany. The Macfarlanes were all down to bid farewell to their house guest, Miss Gladys Pearne, who has won so many friends during her visit in Honolulu. A number of service folk were on the dock to see goodbye to Charles Mason Remey, son of Admiral Remey, and Mr. George Lathimer, young men from Washington's smart set, who had left Honolulu as the best to the last of an extended tour of the world. Col. McGinnis was of course surrounded with friends from Schofield. Mr. Robert Mist sailed for New York, where he will spend a few days with his sister, Mrs. Meier, before the latter's departure for Europe. A very much anticipated young Miss was Helen Wilder, who returned to school in the East after a summer crammed full of parties and good times given in her honor. Mrs. Emmet May, who was formerly a Roth girl, and who is a sister of Mrs. Clifford High, Mrs. Frank Thompson, and Mrs. Ed Dunsenberg, returned to her home in Los Angeles. Mrs. May's visit to the Princess has been sadly interfered with by her serious indisposition, and none of her friends have seen as much of her as they would have liked. The Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Thomas, with their children and the latter's sister, Miss M. P. Mott-Smith, sailed for their home in Rochester, New York. Miss Del Mar, the artist whose pictures have been attracting such wide attention—among people who know, too—bade farewell to her friends, including the Herman Fockes, whom she has been visiting, and started on the first lap of her journey to the East and Europe, where she will continue in her art studies. The George Cooke were seized with the wanderlust and without further ado, embarked upon a long journey, throughout the United States. Mrs. A. H. E. Judd, Mrs. Cooke's mother accompanying them. J. D. Dole, Mr. A. Lewis, Jr., and Mr. Tenney Peck, were three torrid benedictos who sailed without their wives on short business trips. Mr. C. C. von Hamm took his entire family with him on his journey to California. Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Klausen from Kauai were accompanied by their one little daughter, Ruth, who will enjoy the journey East with as keen a delight as her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Spalding were other Kauaiites to sail for California.

It is ever thus that they come and go, here in Hawaii. The spirit of the nomads is in us, stirred by the restless sea and the winds from foreign lands. Yet the magnetism of these green islands is such that sooner or later, the wanderer, both tourist and townsperson, comes sailing back into the blue harbor of Honolulu.

Bridge Tea at the Country Club.

Mrs. B. W. Colley was the guest of honor at an informal but delightful bridge tea at the Country Club, given by Miss D. Hewlings. A number of keenly contested rubbers of auction were played, followed by a substantial English tea. Mrs. W. Stanley, Mrs. A. Hodgins and Mrs. James Cockburn were the lucky winners of the pretty prizes. Those present were Mrs. B. W. Colley, Mrs. Frank Halstead, Mrs. Robert Lange, Mrs. W. Stanley, the Misses Hadley, Mrs. Harold Hayselden, Mrs. Clinton Ballentyne, Mrs. Arthur Davidson, Mrs. Day, Mrs. Arthur Hodgins and Mrs. James Cockburn.

Garrison Tea.

Mrs. Francis H. French, wife of Col. French of Fort Shafter, was hostess at a garrison tea on Wednesday in honor of Mrs. E. V. Smith, who has recently returned from the states, and Mrs. Tower and Mrs. Carpenter, the house-guests of Mrs. G. H. Jamerson. Those invited to meet these ladies were Mrs. Otto Rosenbaum, Mrs. C. S. Gibbs, Mrs. Benjamin Watkins, Mrs. Paul Malone, Mrs. G. H. Jamerson, Mrs. W. Roe, Miss Barrie Gamble, Mrs. M. Love, Mrs. Peter Marquart, Mrs. W. Kay, Mrs. W. R. Gibson, Mrs. A. J. Harris, Mrs. L. O. Mathews, Mrs. J. Longanecker and Mrs. Cary I. Crockett.

Mr. and Mrs. Hedemann's Tea.
Prof. and Mrs. G. Meade were the incentives for a very delightful tea last week, at which Mr. and Mrs. C. Hedemann were hosts. The coffee urn was presided over by Mrs. J. Hedemann, while Mrs. Alexander Hawes, Jr., poured tea. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Meade, Mr. and Mrs. Hardy, Mrs. Sarah Newcomb, Mr. E. Newcomb, Judge and Mrs. Walter Frear, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander G. Hawes, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hedemann, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Castle, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Hitchcock and others.

Mrs. Hedemann's Dinner.
There is no one who entertains more charmingly than Mrs. C. Hedemann, who with her quaint German hospitality, warms the heart of her guest as soon as he crosses her threshold. Her husband is the counterpart of herself in the warmth of his welcome. Last week they were hosts at a delightful dinner at their home on Judd street. Covers were laid for ten, including Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Glade, Miss Glade, Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit Wilder, Miss Alice Cornet and Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Schaefer.

Mrs. Schaefer's Dinner.

A very attractive dinner was given on Wednesday by Miss Pauline Schaefer at her home in Nuuanu valley. The table was ablaze with crimson scarves with their starry-eyed petals and glossy green leaves. After dinner the party motored to the Opera house, where they witnessed the "Girl From Rectors." A toothsome Dutch supper at the Rathskeller concluded the evening. Among those who enjoyed Miss Schaefer's hospitality were Miss Ruth Anderson, Miss Ruth Soper, Miss Thelma Murphy, Miss Margaret Center, Mr. Francis Brown, Mr. Francis Eames, Mr. Charles Herbert, Mr. Robert Purvis and Mr. Allan Repton.

The Howard Concert.

A treat that will be greatly appreciated by the music loving world of Honolulu is set for next Thursday, the twenty-fifth, when Mrs. Elsa Cross Howard will give her first public concert in this city. Mrs. Howard is already widely known as a pianist of unusual genius. Her wide study and untiring perseverance have raised her high in the ranks of artists. She plays with an ease and facility and lack of self-consciousness which are factors to immediately take her out of the amateur class; although her wonderful technique is something acquired after long study, her sympathy of touch and interpretation are inborn—the inimitable gift of the rare musician.

Assisting Mrs. Howard will be Mrs. Charles B. Cooper and Mr. Reynold McGrew, both of whom possess voices of unusual charm and culture. Mrs. A. B. Ingalls, though not appearing on the concert stage, is lending invaluable assistance as business manager. The program is one that will appeal not only to the trained musician but to the less-studied layman as well. The songs by Mrs. Howard will be, of course, of particular interest. The program is as follows:

- (a) Gigue by Corelli
- (b) Gavotte by Corelli
- (c) Prelude and Fugue by Bach
- (d) On Shelton River by Mrs. Howard
- (e) Amy Woodford Finden
- (f) Allah Be With Us by Mrs. C. B. Cooper
- (g) Sonatas, Opus 27, No. 2 by Adagio, Allegretto, Poco Agitato
- (h) Beethoven
- (i) From "Stars of the Desert" by Mrs. Howard
- (j) To All That Is Lovely by Mrs. Howard
- (k) Fate by Mrs. Cooper
- (l) Polonaise in F Flat, Chopin
- (m) Ballade in G Minor, Chopin
- (n) Mrs. Howard
- (o) Far Across the Desert Sands by Mrs. Cooper
- (p) Lovelace, Elsa Cross Howard
- (q) Rhapsodie Hungroise No. 13, Liszt
- (r) Mrs. Howard
- (s) To Liliuokalani by Mrs. Howard
- (t) Elsa Cross Howard
- (u) Kaili Quartet

Among those who will be patronesses at the concert are Her Majesty Queen Liliuokalani, Mrs. Walter F. Frear, Mrs. J. B. Castle, Mrs. F. M. Swamy, Mrs. George Davies, Mrs. Walter F. Dillingham, Mrs. Samuel Wilder, Mrs. A. G. Hawes, Mrs. Robbins Anderson, Mrs. H. C. Coleman, Mrs. J. M. Atherton, Mrs. W. M. Giffard, Mrs. A. Hocking, Mrs. C. Hedemann, Mrs. Rannie Scott, Mrs. B. L. Marx, Mrs. Tenney Peck, Mrs. J. A. Balch, Mrs. A. B. Ingalls, Mrs. J. F. Erdman, Mrs. F. T. P. Waterhouse, Mrs. D. H. Hitchcock and Mrs. D. M. Appel.

Mrs. Cartwright's Luncheon.

Mrs. Bruce Cartwright, who always entertains so charmingly, was hostess at a very attractive luncheon yesterday, at the Country Club. The affair was in honor of Mrs. K. C. Atwood and Mrs. Martin of New York, distinguished visitors at the Young. Her table was a thing of beauty in its decoration of huge double cerise pink hibiscus and ferns. The place mats were heavy linen cards embellished with the Cartwright crest in silver. Dainty pictures of the hostess in fancy costume were at the places of the guests of honor. Those present were Mrs. Robbins Anderson, Mrs. Claire Williams, Mrs. Tenney Peck, Mrs. Edward Timberlake, Mrs. Alexander Hawes, Jr., and Mrs. Atwood and Mrs. Martin.

Mrs. Leo Sahn, who was formerly Miss Edith Cowles, daughter of Admiral Cowles, is spending a month or two in Washington, D. C., while her husband's ship, the South Dakota, is stationed in Mexico.

Send the kiddies' linen dresses to the French Laundry, where linen lasts.

Many mothers do so because they know that by our methods every piece of linen is thoroughly cleansed under the most sanitary and hygienic conditions.

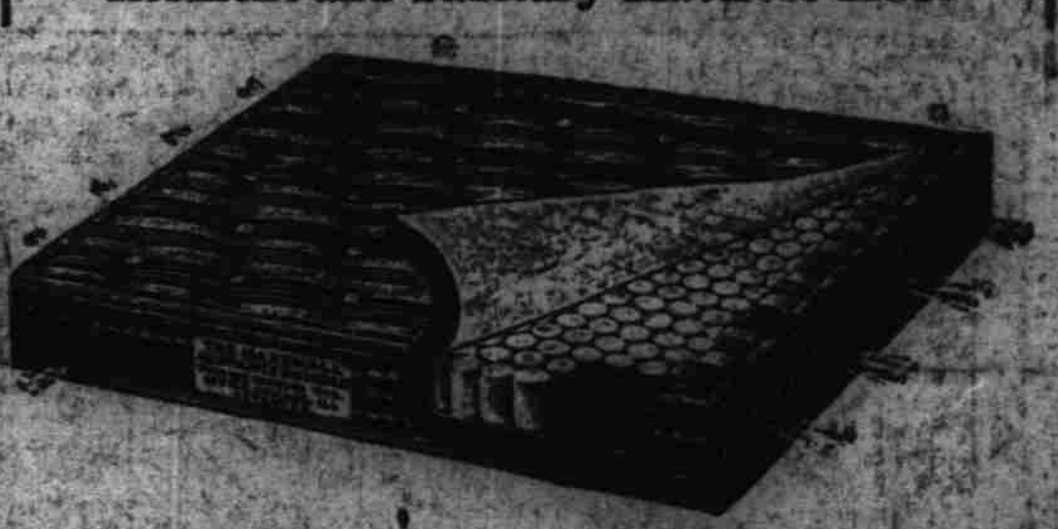

The kiddies are harder on clothes than grown-ups, and the French Laundry is easier on clothes than any other laundry in town; that's why clothes washed here give twice the ordinary service.
